VMware vSphere 7.0: Support deadline extended

More time to plan, take action today!

VMware by Broadcom has postponed the originally planned End of General Support (EoGS) date for vSphere 7.0 from 2 April 2025 by six months. The new deadline is now 2 October 2025. This gives businesses more time to prepare for upgrading to a newer version.

What does this mean for customers?

The extension gives you extra time to plan your upgrade to vSphere 8.0. Until 2 October 2025, support and security updates will still be available – after that, only paid support options will be offered.

What can you do now?

Make the most of this additional time by planning your upgrade early. SoftwareOne can help you develop the best strategy for transitioning to vSphere 8.0 or exploring alternative solutions. Our experts provide a comprehensive analysis of your environment and guide you towards the most efficient path for your IT future.

Key dates at a glance

The table below outlines the key milestones for vSphere 7.0, including release dates, the original and new support deadlines, and the period for technical guidance.
